PROJECT NUMBER TEN

Special Types of Speech

SPEAKER _____

DATE _____

SUBJECT _____

EVALUATOR _____

Note to Evaluator: The speaker has been advised to deliver what is termed an “occasional speech.” They will tell you just what subject and imaginary occasion they have selected. You are to watch them as to appropriateness of the treatment, cleverness, originality, interest and general merit of their speech, in view of the occasion and purpose for which it is intended.

Your Evaluation

In your spoken evaluation, discuss the speech from the standpoint of fitness for the simulated occasion. Think of the audience which the speaker has in mind, and point out why it did or did not get across. Consider the opening and conclusion, the enthusiasm and conviction shown by the speaker, and note its general effectiveness. How well would this speech do for the purpose the speaker had in mind?

1. Did the speaker give the occasion a sense of reality?

2. Was the speech well designed to suit the occasion?

3. Did it have good audience interest?

4. Was the delivery effective?

5. If the occasion had been real, would you, as a member of the audience, have felt that it was satisfactory?

6. Give the speaker your best suggestions for further improvement.
