

Evaluation Guide

SPEECH NUMBER ONE

The Ice Breaker

SPEAKER _____

DATE _____

SUBJECT _____

EVALUATOR _____

Note to the Evaluator: You have been assigned to evaluate this speech, the speaker's first attempt before your club. They have been advised to talk about themselves, their life, their hobby, their business or other personal interests. They are to introduce themselves to the club. They were told to use notes if they need them, and to forget their hands, or put them behind their back, and to concentrate on telling their story.

Write your comments on this sheet, so that the speaker may have a permanent record of evaluation. They will keep your comments at hand as they prepare their next speech. Remember your own first experience as a speaker, and give this newcomer the help you wish you could have had on that occasion.

In your brief speech of evaluation, be encouraging and helpful. Don't try to "pour it on" the speaker. Give them the best of it in every way consistent with the truth. Tell them how to do better.

Did they really put their story across?

Did they introduce themselves so that the club now knows them better?

What qualities in their material, or their personality, or their manner of speaking did you observe which encourage you to believe that they will become a good speaker by faithful practice?

What two or three specific suggestions can you give them that will help them to do better in their next attempt?

Did you notice any conspicuous mannerisms or faults which interfered with their success? If so, list them. IF THESE WERE NOT SERIOUS, DO NOT MENTION THEM.
